When Jane married her college sweetheart and the love of her life, she never dreamed she would lose him to leukemia before either of them reached forty. A year later, she's struggling to move on and create a new life for herself, a second act that she never expected to have to follow the first. Picking up the pieces is hard enough—it's even harder when those closest to her don't understand or support the way she's trying to put them back together again. But while the curtain may have come down on the life she originally had planned, life itself certainly isn't finished with her yet. And neither, as it turns out, is her heart.
