Memoirs of Dr Andrew Moonir Khan - A great Educator in Trinidad and Tobago, has been described accurately by one reviewer. "There is a need for books like this one- books which document the struggle of the first generations of immigrants and their children to carve a place in their society , and then provide the foundation for the next generation to achieve even greater success.

In broad terms this is general knowledge.

What is valuable in this book is the step by step description detailing the road map by which one successful educator did so.

What is also appreciated is the incidental description of day to day life in pre independence Trinidad.

Congratulations - post humous though they have to be- to Dr. Khan for the foresight in documenting his memoirs for the benefit of those who -generations later - are curious about the journey."

Another reviewer said, " the book in its lifelike and meaningful way depicts the story of a great man, a true exemplar, a national hero."
