Terrorism is not the only concern for Europe and the United States in regards to the mass influx of asylum seeking refugees and immigrants from the Middle East and Africa. But, before I go any further you need to know that I DO believe in immigration, diversity, tolerance, religious freedom, peace and love for my fellow man. Perhaps I am the minority on this. But, what saddens me the most is to see the loss of the unique European cultures. And, everything that goes with that. Including the types of food unique to specific nations, the architecture, the mentality, the arts and the work ethics, the languages, religions, mannerisms, education, cleanliness, organizational skills, customs, holidays and dare I say it, even the ethnicity's. I would like my great-great grandchildren to be able to visit Germany, England and Sweden (All part of my ethnic makeup) and to see a German, Swedish or an English culture. It will be a great loss if in the future these nations more closely resemble a Middle Eastern or African nation than they do a European nation. I know that might sound exaggerated at this point in time. But, there is plenty of evidence to support this possibility in the future. The Muslim cultures are the polar opposites of European cultures. And many of them want the Europeans to change to accommodate their ideology. There are now more Mosques in France and Germany than Christian churches. Many Europeans have come to accept the almost certainty that the European nations will become Muslim in this century. And my question is... do you think the world will be a better place when that happens? Will our love, kindness and democracy prevail? Do you think that the Muslims will adopt our benevolent ways? There is also much evidence to support that many cultures are not assimilating and adopting the values of the host countries. Therefore, the laws, religion and ideology will become the same in Europe as they are in the Middle East. Do you think the world will be a better place when that happens? Have many of us just given up? Do you think that perhaps Europeans and European Americans feel guilty because of the sins of our forefathers? For example, the slave trade, the Holocaust and the unfair treatment of the Native Americans? Has our moral and humanitarian evolution gone too far to the left? Have we become over apologetic for crimes that our generations did not commit? Are we committing suicide to make amends for our ancestor's sins? Will the world be a better place when we are gone?
